

Capitol Compass: Peer Feedback Response

Carter Threatt | CSCE 242 | Project Part 5

Fixed

Not addressed (comment explains why)

Noted (no change needed)

Peer Review 1: Nicolas Gauvin

HOMEPAGE

I really like this color scheme.

Noted. Thank you, the navy, maroon, and gold palette stays as is.

I would add the smithsonian to your main nav. It looks like this page hasn't been built yet.

Not added to the nav, but the dead link is fixed. The Smithsonian is not one of the four pages in this project (Home, Monuments & Memorials, Capitol Tours, White House Tours), so I kept the main nav to the pages that exist. The real problem behind this note was that the Smithsonian card on the homepage went nowhere, so it now opens the official Smithsonian site (si.edu) in a new tab.

MONUMENTS & MEMORIALS

I would consider adding an image or some kind of visual to the banner.

Not changed. I chose to keep the banner as it is. It uses the same navy diagonal-stripe texture as the Capitol Tours and White House Tours banners so the three guide pages feel like a set, and the plain texture keeps the white title easy to read on every screen size. A photo would need a dark overlay to stay readable, and the page already has plenty of photography right below the banner (the Lincoln Memorial slideshow and the Rest of The District cards).

CAPITOL TOURS

You mention three different interpretations of the phrase "capitol tour" but then only break it down into two different types.

Fixed. The intro sentence now says "the two things that phrase can mean," which matches the two-column comparison table and the banner subtitle ("Two different tours, two different processes").

Peer Review 2

I would change the font color of A VISITOR'S GUIDE TO WASHINGTON, D.C to something that has more contrast with the image it sits on top of Fixed. The small line above the homepage headline was gold text on top of a busy sunset photo. It is now white and bold, so it reads clearly against the image.

In the homepage, maybe make the images in the destination section also function as links to their respective pages

Fixed. Each destination image is now a link to the same page as its title.

The links in the destination section on the homepage do not work

Fixed. The links pointed to file names that do not exist (monuments.html, capitol-tours.html, white-house-tours.html). They now go to the real Monuments, Capitol Tours, and White House Tours pages, and the Smithsonian card opens si.edu in a new tab.

In the white house tours page, the three card buttons under the images are not aligned (the leftmost reserve pass button)

Fixed. The People's House description is longer than the other two, which pushed its button down. The cards now keep their buttons pinned to the bottom, so all three buttons line up at every screen width.

The title on the tab does not change when you go from screen to screen

Fixed. Every page already had its own title, but they all began with the same words ("Capitol Compass —"), so the tab text looked identical once the tab was cut off. Each title now starts with the page name: Home, Monuments & Memorials, Capitol Tours, and White House Tours, followed by | Capitol Compass.

Additional Feedback (instructor)

In the What to put in the email, we could eventually make a contact form.

Not added yet. Forms have not been covered in class yet, and the note says "eventually," so I did not add one for this version. In the meantime, the Copy this template button (written in JavaScript) lets a visitor copy the email text with one click and send it from their own email.

In white house tours on small screen, the 'A nickname...' box is too close to the 'Security Details'

Fixed. Added space under the nickname callout on small screens so it no longer touches the Security Details heading. The desktop layout is unchanged. I found the same crowding on Capitol Tours (the Full Prohibited Items List button sat right on top of the What you'll actually see heading) and fixed that too.

I'm sure impressed with your site.... it's really come together :)

Noted. Thank you!
